Proposed PST hike could face legal action

Decision disputed. Law professor not sure court challenge would stick

The Canadian Taxpayers Federation says it is "looking into" a possible legal challenge over the province's decision to raise the PST without holding a referendum first.

But a Manitoba law professor says the province would likely survive a court challenge because governments are usually free to rewrite their own rules.

"It could be that these (balanced budget) laws are more of a statement of principle or a symbolic statement than they can be strictly enforced in the courts," said Bryan Schwartz, a law professor at the University of Manitoba who specialized in legislative process.

The NDP government introduced an omnibus bill last week that would both raise the sales tax to eight per cent from seven as of July 1, and eliminate the need for a referendum to approve the tax hike.

Under the current balanced-budget law, enacted by the Tory government of the 1990s, a referendum must be held before a bill to raise the tax can be introduced in the legislature.

While the government's bill appears to violate the law,

Schwartz said courts are generally loath to prevent a government from amending its own laws, unless there are constitutional or Charter of Rights and Freedoms issues at play.

Finance Minister Stan Struthers did not directly answer questions on Friday as to whether he feels the tax-increase bill is legal. He said the tax hike is needed to fund flood-fighting projects and maintain government services.

"We're very confident, as we move forward, that this is the right thing to do."

A joint effort. Police happy pot protest was 'peaceful'

The estimated crowd of 3,500 that met at the Legislative Building Saturday to openly smoke pot to protest its prohibition was on their best behaviour, according to police.

"Overall the atmosphere was very cordial and very respectful," said police spokesperson Cst. Jason Michalyshen Sunday of the annual 420 protest. "From our perspective it was a peaceful event."

Michalyshen said police had "appropriate resources" on hand in case of trouble, but added the force does not make arrests despite the obvious law breaking.

"We have to be realistic, that by arresting all these individuals it's just not practical," he said. "On this one particular day members of the public are allowed to demonstrate... and we will not arrest people for using marijuana. However... we certainly don't want that to be confused with that we condone it or support it." SHANE GIBSON/METRO

Tax incentive aims to boost social housing development

Government tempts builders with credit.

Committed to adding 1,000 affordable, social housing to province

BERNICE PONTANILLA

bernice.pontanilla@metronews.ca

The Manitoba government is giving developers a tax credit in the hopes it will spur the construction of about 1,000 affordable and social housing units.

Housing and Community Development Minister Kerri Irvin-Ross made the announcement in St. Boniface Friday, near the construction site of the new 28-unit Place Bernadette Poirier.

"We have been hearing loud and clear from community advocates, business, about the need for affordable and social housing, so in budget 2013, we decided to up our commitment," said

Maurice Therrien, chair of the board of directors of Sara Riel Inc., left, Mel Biosvert of the Winnipeg Realtors Association, Minister Kerri Irvin-Ross and Clark Brownlee of Right to Housing. BERNICE PONTANILLA/METRO

Irvin-Ross, adding that commitment is for 500 affordable and 500 social housing units.

"It's part of a comprehensive plan, a plan that talks about restoring and rebuilding our existing housing stock, as well as providing RentAid supplements to individuals, and then also the PST tax credit, which is going to hopefully be an incentive for builders to keep building in this great province."

The Residential Rental Housing Investment Tax Credit provides an eight per cent credit on construction costs for private developers to build new rental housing that includes affordable units.

The Manitoba government has also committed to investing $100 million annually to restore and redevelop housing units it is responsible for as well as $34 million to repair existing units, added Irvin-Ross.

Thousands protest same-sex marriage bill

Demonstrators march during a rally to protest against French President Francois Hollande's social reform on gay marriage and adoption in Paris Sunday. As opposition mounted from conservative groups from more rural parts of the country, tens of thousands of demonstrators took to Paris boulevards on Sunday to protest the expected passage this week of the bill. Both houses of the French parliament have already approved the bill in a first reading. The second and final reading is expected Tuesday. Polls have shown a narrow majority of French favour allowing such unions, though the support weakens when questions about adoption and conception of children come into play. Serbia's ruling parties pledged Sunday to support a landmark agreement to normalize relations with former province Kosovo that could end years of tensions and put both states on a path to European Union membership.

Kosovo, considered by nationalists to be the medieval cradle of the Serbian state and religion, declared independence in 2008. Belgrade has pledged never to recognize the secession.

Rehtaeh Parsons. Mother to discuss new law with the PM on Tuesday

The mother and stepfather of Rehtaeh Parsons are meeting with the prime minister Tuesday to discuss how to ensure the distribution of sexually explicit images without consent is treated as a criminal offence.

"The meeting is specifically revolving around one aspect. It's revolving around changes to the criminal code," Leah Parsons said in a telephone interview.

The teen attempted to hang herself on April 4 and was taken off life-support three days later.

Her family says she was sexually assaulted at a party and a sexually explicit photo was distributed.

Calls for the criminalization of the distribution of intimate images without consent have increased since the death of the 17-year-old Nova Scotian became public and created an outpouring of anger and grief.

Police said initially they couldn't prosecute due to insufficient evidence, but recently reopened the case.

He said it was time to stop using the term bullying to describe such incidents, saying they are often "youth criminal activity."

Son of Gadhafi plot?

Canadian Cyndy Vanier home from a Mexican prison

A Canadian woman who spent the past 18 months languishing in a Mexican prison has come home.

Cyndy Vanier arrived quietly at Pearson airport Saturday where she was greeted by family and friends.

Vanier, 52, was released Friday after a Mexican court upheld her appeal. She has denied allegations of spearheading a plot to smuggle the son of Moammar Gadhafi into Mexico.

The native of Mount Forest, Ont., declined to speak with reporters upon her arrival home.

Vanier has insisted her only connection to Libya was contract work she did for SNC Lavalin, a Montreal-based engineering giant with projects in that north African country. Prosecutors alleged she and at least three others conspired to sneak Al-Saadi Gadhafi into Mexico. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Splashy gun-registry announcements yanked

Minister of Public Safety Vic Toews talks about the gun registry during a news conference in Ottawa in February of last year. Public servants spent a month last fall preparing two splashy announcements heralding the destruction of the long-gun registry data only to have the events cancelled at the last moment without explanation. ADRIAN WYLD/THE CANADIAN PRESS

No explanation. At last moment, major national events became 'a note under the door'

Public servants spent a full month, at the "urgent" request of Public Safety Minister Vic Toews, preparing two splashy announcements heralding the destruction of the long-gun registry data — only to have the events cancelled at the last moment without explanation.

The final deletion of millions of registry records last Oct. 31 could be seen as a crowning achievement for a Conservative government that had campaigned against the registry for over a decade. Instead, Toews confirmed the destruction during a closed-door meeting in Regina in a manner that one puzzled gun advocate likens to sliding "a note under the door."

The local delivery was all the more puzzling given the taxpayer-funded resources poured into preparing two major "national" media events to mark the occasion.

As late as mid-afternoon on Oct. 29, less than 24 hours before the first media event, an email was circulated with fully developed plans for the two events attached.

And then, nothing. No events, no speeches, no photos, not even a news release.

Questions about why the communications material was prepared but not delivered were ignored by Toews' office this week. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Toews: We can learn from Boston

Lessons can be learned by the explosions at the Boston Marathon, Canada's public safety minister said Sunday.

Canadian security forces are equipped and prepared to respond to these kinds of incidents, Vic Toews told CTV on Sunday.

One important lesson is that all levels of policing and government must work together in the event of a terrorist attack, Toews said.

"We can always learn from this type of horrific experience," Toews said.

"I'm certain that police forces right across Canada are re-examining their plans in order to determine what we do better in order to prepare for this type of possibility."

Ret. Cpl. Frank Smyth said he wasn't trying to be a hero when he tried relentlessly to join the army two weeks after his 17th birthday, only to be turned away due to his age.

"Even though I kept paying people with bottles of booze to change my records, I kept getting caught," the Korean war veteran told Metro during an interview Saturday. "Someone said, 'Well, why did you want to go?' It's because that's where all my buddies were going."

Smyth is one of 36 Korean War veterans flying to South Korea — some for the first time since the armistice was signed in 1953 — who were gathered in Vancouver ahead of the trip.

Smyth finally arrived in Korea to support his friends after the armistice as a military policeman patrolling the DMZ

Boston bombings. Suspects were planning more attacks, police say

Investigators believe that two brothers suspected in the Boston Marathon bombing were likely planning other attacks based on the cache of weapons uncovered, the city's police commissioner said Sunday.

As Boston-area residents came together in prayer and reflection, the surviving suspect in the bombing lay hospitalized under guard, apparently in no shape for interrogation.

What 19-year-old Dzhokhar Tsarnaev will say and when are unclear. He remained in serious condition two days after being pulled wounded from a boat in a backyard. The capture came at the end of a tense Friday that began with his brother, Tamerlan, dying in a gun battle with police.

There was no immediate word on when Tsarnaev might be charged and what those charges would be. The twin bombings killed three people and wounded more than 180.

Four days and 50 versions of Margaritaville later, talent scouts for the Jimmy Buffett-themed restaurant, music and gambling complex that will open next month have a pretty good idea which acts they'll hire to perform there.

Requirements include an ability to play a wide variety of music, accommodate audience requests and, yes, to know at least a few Buffett tunes.

Not surprisingly, most of the acts opted for his tropical ode to frozen drinks and that mythical lost shaker of salt.

Traders await slew of earnings reports after dismal week on the TSX

The Toronto stock market could be set to move further into negative territory this week as a slew of resource companies deliver quarterly earnings reports.

The TSX had a dismal week, closing down 2.2 per cent, leaving the main Toronto index down 2.95 per cent year to date, as a new round of worry sparked

'We are absolutely no Cyprus': Slovenian PM

Slovenian Prime Minister Alenka Bratusek speaks after an economic meeting last week. Banks have for years unselectively credited unprofitable state companies or privileged officials who used the cash to buy firms they ran, using the state assets as collateral. DARKO BANDIC/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Slovenian officials have a message for the world: Don't panic — we won't be the next to fall.

The tiny European Union member is trying to convince its people and foreign investors that it won't be the next in line for a banking-system collapse and messy bailout.

"We are absolutely no Cyprus," says new Slovenian Prime Minister Alenka Bratusek. "We don't need help. All we need is time."

But time is running out for the Balkan state, once considered an East European success story and a model for the rest of the region on how to build a post-communist economy. With few specifics from leaders on a rescue plan, some economists are skeptical they can live up to their promises.

Slovenia desperately needs fundamental reform of its banking and economic system if it is to avoid the same fate as Cyprus, which was forced to ask for a bailout when it could not afford to support its bloated banking sector.

Now the fear is Slovenia could face the same fate. While its overall public debt load is well below the EU average, the country of two million is facing difficulties refinancing its debt. That has fuelled fears that it could become the sixth eurozone nation to require assistance. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SWIFT DECISION MAKING

Stan Struthers and Taylor Swift might not have much in common, but the provincial finance minister sounded like he was channeling the pop starlet when he stood up to give his performance for the 2013 budget speech last week.

Not just because the colour of this budget is red, just like the title of Swift's latest album, but because he sang a dramatic tale of trouble.

We've got flood trouble. We've got infrastructure trouble. We've got financial trouble. Oh, trouble, trouble, trouble...

Perhaps not forgetting his country roots, opposition leader Brian Pallister weighed in with his own verse, alleging it's the NDP that has trouble. Math trouble. Spending trouble. Legal trouble. Oh, trouble, trouble trouble...

They could both be right, but what's most, umm, troubling is that they're largely ignoring one of the big problems of this or any provincial budget, which is that nobody ever bothers to ask the people who are paying for it (the public) what

URBAN COMPASS
Colin Fast
winnipeg@metronews.ca

they think.

Yes, the government does hold pre-budget consultations, but that's more of a PR road show than an actual budgeting tool. I'm talking about letting the public have meaningful input into government priorities.

For example, the theme of this year's budget is "Focused on what matters most to families" (unofficial subhead: "Not drowning"), but did the government check how Manitoba families felt about a sales tax increase that will cost them $300 more per household every year?

Nope. Heck, it doesn't even want to give the public the chance to vote on the increase, as required by law. It would rather change the law instead.

The Tory opposition isn't much better, as there's no evidence Pallister asked anyone outside of his own body what they thought about his proposal to scrap the PST increase and indiscriminately cut hundreds of millions from various department budgets. The public might have a thought or two on decreased service levels, as well.

However, the good news for the government is that, having made the case we're headed for trouble, it's also opened up an opportunity to make a big move.

But rather than wasting this opportunity by simply raising taxes, it could use it as an excuse to reinvent the budget process from the ground up. Scrap the old budget, which is weighed down by remnants of the 140-odd ones that came before it, and start with a blank slate.

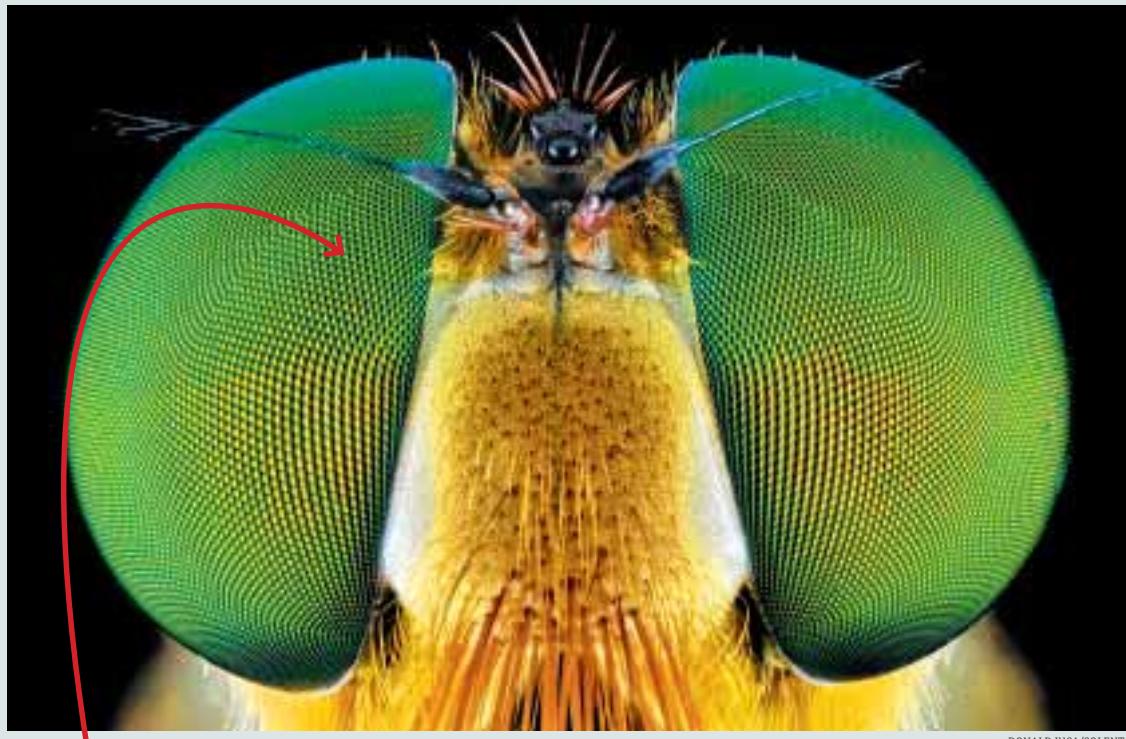

Hold a wide-ranging conversation with Manitobans about what they need from government, and how they want to pay for it. Talk with frontline employees about which programs are really making an impact. Throw everything on the table, from scrapping some taxes entirely to adding new programs, and vice-versa.

But most of all, just give people a chance to really be heard.

Because if the government doesn't rebuild trust with the public and get a grip on finances at the same time, then it could be writing its own break-up song with Manitoba voters. Paging Taylor Swift...

RE: BPA In Most Canadians' Urine, Effects Unknown, published April 17

In the piece, bisphenol A or BPA is identified as being found in plastic "food and beverage containers."

Within the context of beverage containers used to package bottled water and other non-alcoholic consumer beverages, this statement requires clarification.

BPA is not used in the production of PET plastic-based beverage containers, which have been in use by the Canadian beverage industry for more than 25 years.

According to Health Canada,

BPA is used to "make a hard, clear plastic known as polycarbonate, which is used in many consumer products, including reusable water bottles and baby bottles. It is also found in epoxy resins, which act as a protective lining on the inside of metal-based food and beverage cans."

Health Canada further states that "current research tells us the general public need not be concerned. In general, most Canadians are exposed to very low levels of bisphenol A, therefore, it does not pose a health risk."

Weekend of Jepsen.
Pop singer takes home hardware for her album and bubblegum hit

The 42nd Juno Awards dialled in on Carly Rae Jepsen, celebrating the cheerful singer/songwriter and her rollercoaster summer smash Call Me Maybe with three trophies that all came at the expense of the teen superstar who helped discover her: Justin Bieber.

Jepsen had the biggest haul of the weekend with marquee wins for single, album and pop album of the year — all categories in which the absent 19-year-old pop pinup/tabloid spectacle from Stratford, Ont., was also nominated — at a briskly paced Prairies party at the Brandt Centre.

The Mission, B.C., native seemed particularly stunned that her gold-selling DayGlo valentine to '80s pop Kiss triumphed in the biggest category of the evening, album of the year, over those multi-platinum efforts from Bieber and Celine Dion.

Juno fever

Jepsen the star of Saturday

The Juno Awards celebrated Canadian music stars old and new Saturday night as first-time winner Carly Rae Jepsen and veteran Leonard Cohen both scored major prizes while moody R&B singer the Weeknd led the field at a dinner gala where the bulk of the trophies were handed out.

Jepsen, the weekend's premiere nominee with a five-category haul, took pop album of the year over a stacked field that included headline-snatching superstar Justin Bieber, while Cohen won artist of the year over the both of them — his fourth career Juno.

While most of the evening's well-known winners were absent from the event, Jepsen showed up to nab her first-ever Juno and struggled to gather the words.

"Oh my goodness. Wow. Thank you so much," she said. "I can remember back in 2010 when I was nominated with Ryan Stewart for songwriter of the year and I thought to myself that that was the most amazing moment of my life. But I was wrong. It's right now."

THE CANADIAN PRESS

his second Juno of the year — fifth of his career — for songwriter of the year after releasing his platinum-certified Old Ideas. The award was accepted by his son, singer Adam Cohen.

Seventy-eight-year-old Montreal troubadour Leonard Cohen also had a good weekend in the Saskatchewan capital, wrestling with his fourth career Juno win, this time for the fan choice award. Surely, if the Junos' voting bloc doesn't consider the recently troubled teen worthy of celebration, his droves of devotees still do — it's the third time they've carried him to that particular honour.

And Marianas Trench, the dramatic Vancouver pop outfit, won group of the year despite missing out on other nominations for their platinum concept record Ever After, while 27-year-old frontman Josh Ramsay also shared in the elation at Jepsen's single of the year win given his co-write of her Skittles-sweet smash.

With the gala's youthful bent, Serena Ryder actually seemed a grizzled veteran next to some of her newbie peers. She won adult alternative album of the year — her fourth career Juno — for her gold-certified Harmony and the husky-voiced singer/songwriter with the astonishing vocal range put in a roof-rattling performance of her propulsive recent hit Stompa.

Talking life:

Interview. Metro's special guests talk about fathers and sons, girls and Jada, Bieber and hip hop, and why Jaden won't party

BRAW

elisabeth.braw@metro.lu

"Will's here," says an assistant.

No kidding. His laugh — familiar from 100 episodes of Fresh Prince — booms across the Hollywood soundstage as he arrives to meet me.

Despite being the single biggest star on the planet, with a net worth of $200 million, Smith still comes off as happy-go-lucky — and happy to laugh at his own jokes.

His son, Jaden, follows behind, serious, yet gracious. A box-office draw in his own right, after The Karate Kid, the 14-year-old toplines their new film After Earth, set 1,000 years into the future.

In it, Jaden's character braves a planet overgrown by wild creatures to save his injured father, played by Smith.

In an intimate, hour-long chat, the two discussed working together, Jaden's musical style and the inevitable: life with mom.

That very week, Jada Pinkett Smith posted a Facebook missive, clarifying earlier statements about her and Will's "open relationship," calling it instead a "grown relationship."

Smith talked about that as best he could, given that his young son sat right there.

You guys work together, live together — but online, I see videos of Jaden skateboarding, talking about girls—

Jaden: Um-hmm. Um-hmm.

So I wondered—

Will: Wait. (To Jaden) You be talking about girls a whole lot?

Jaden: In interviews, Dad. About them. I'm not online, like, "Hey, girls, hello!" (Mimes taking a photo of himself) Tweet!

Will, how aware are you of what Jaden's doing?

Will: Not much at all. Not much at all. That's what I like him to think. (Laughs) I have a group of Men in Black that keep up pretty good.

Jaden: This is what I've realized: No matter what I do or how I do it, he knows 100 per cent of what's going on.

Will: (Laughs)

Jaden: There's no point in hiding anything because he knows. Whether he acts on it or not, he knows.

How do you know he knows?

Jaden: I just know that he knows (Both laugh).

Will: I heard Jaden's friend

one time, they were sitting around, talking about something and I came in the room and said, "Hi" and walked out of the room and paused for a second and I hear the friend saying, "Dude, I'm telling you, he knows! He knows!" (Both laugh uproariously)

When was the last time you were punished, Jaden?

Will: We don't do punishment. The way that we deal with our kids is, they are responsible for their lives.

Our concept is, as young as possible, give them as much control over their lives as possible and the concept of punishment, our experience has been — it has a little too much of a negative quality. So when they do things — and you know, Jaden, he's done things — you can do anything you want as long as you can explain to me why that was the right thing to do for your life.

Jaden: It works pretty well.

But most teenagers aren't naturally introspective. Jaden, do you find that you ask yourself deep questions about your behaviour and acting accordingly?

Jaden: Yeah. Other teenagers go to parties and sometimes I be like, "Why am I here right now?" And most of the time, I just leave right then and there. Some things I don't like to do, that other teenagers do. Everyone thinks that since you make movies, you go to parties, and I like to party, but not normal teenage parties.

Will and Jaden Smith

The second coming

"I mean, people are already telling me I look like him, that I talk and walk like him. If I rapped like him too, people would be like, 'Let's go on the Fresh Prince tour.'" Jaden Smith

Are you missing out on a good ol' fashioned American childhood?

Jaden: Not at all. I go out and skate every night. Hang out with people, skate, hang out with more people, skate to their house.

Will: (To Jaden) What do you see as the purpose and point? So you're not going out and partying — what's the purpose, what's the point, what are you doing?

Jaden: It's not like I don't want to go to parties because I need to study and go to college; I just don't wanna go. If they're gonna play house music, I'm maybe interested, but if it's some random place and they're playing Waka Flocka Flame...

You're anti-generic.

Jaden: Exactly.

Will, how and when did you and Jada decide Jaden could handle a full-fledged movie career?

Will: You can never be certain. You have an idea. You can feel your kids, but until the things in their lives start to unfold and the things they cause begin to have effects, you can never totally see. But we felt that because they were choosing a business that we were both successful in, then at a minimum, we could give good advice.

You used the phrase "they were choosing" but did they choose? Jaden, you were going to the red carpet when you were in diapers.

Jaden: It was not going to the red carpet so people could see us, it was going to the red carpet because we had free tickets.

Will: That's what our life was. The family has a movie so they're going.

Jaden: It started with, our mom is going to the red carpet, she doesn't want to leave us with somebody so she's going to bring us. Then it got to us walking. And then it got to us starring in movies.

Jaden, your music is trippy. It's far from Will's feel-good beats. Is that consciously your own thing?

Jaden: I mean, people are already telling me I look like him, that I talk and walk like him. If I rapped like him too, people would be like, 'Let's go on the Fresh Prince tour.'

Fresh Prince and Fresh Prince Jr. — I would go to that tour.

Jaden: I had to go way left with it because if I came out with a song with me and a bunch of girls in a car with sunglasses on (the Pacific Coast Highway) going, 'Yeah!' they'd go, 'That's the average thing to do.' Instead I came out with the video for The Coolest and people were like, 'Whoa! The camera's going upside down.'

Will, can you even connect to his music, at your age?

Will: At 14, his mind is so much deeper and more complex than my mind was at 14 years old. Lyrically, where he goes and what he creates and how the things are conceptually is beyond what I could create at 14 years old.

Or even later in your career. Miami is not telling a complex story.

Will: Right. Poetically, he's beyond where I ever go to with my music. My strength is ideas. And record structure. I knew how to make records in the way you get to the hook when the crowd wants it.

Jaden: That's what you're really good at. You could go anywhere and be like, "When I say hip, you say hop," and they'll all say it! If I go up there, I'll say, "Alright guys, I'm gonna read you a Shakespearean sonnet real quick, here I go." (Both laugh) The funniest part to me is the music, the old school sound of the music that I have in some of my songs is like what his old school beats used to sound like. It's just different. We're the opposite, but similar in some ways.

The DNA.

Will: That's my seed. Remember where you came from.

Jaden, would you produce Will's album?

Jaden: If you decided, like, "Alright Jaden, I'm serious, I want to make an album" —

Will: Oh, if I was serious?

Jaden: I mean, you have movies to make. Businesses you want to start. You're a busy man.

Will: I see how it is.

Jaden may be too big for you, Will.

Will: I know, I know. He's very serious and very focused and has a very rare combination of talent, desire, willingness and means. Which very, very rarely do those things come together and converge in the proper timing. So I'm excited to see what he decides to do with his life.

Jaden, what happens when you're 18 and Will kicks you out of the house.

Jaden: We'll probably work together till he retires and he probably won't retire.

Will: No we've been talking about, he's been thinking about becoming an emancipated minor.

Jaden: Just thoughts that pop into my head.

They made a movie about that — a girl divorced her parents.

Jaden: Really!

Rent that, get some tips.

Will: No, it's not like that. More the idea that, I want him to have as much command and freedom if he is willing to accept responsibility. Those are two concepts that are inexorably bound. So he's a very responsible young man so he's entitled to the maximum freedom. (To Jaden) I said "inexorably." You heard that? Someone Google that for Jaden.

Justin Bieber, who you're both friends with, has been in the press for some growing pains. Did you learn anything from his last six months?

Will: I talk to Justin once a week and Justin is suffering from immature adulthood in the media and surrounding world. Justin's not doing anything that a normal 19-year-old wouldn't want to do and wouldn't need to do to become a man. The transition from boyhood to manhood is a very difficult transition that he's handling on a world stage better than 95 per cent of the people who talk about him.

Bieber's on Twitter. Jaden, you're on Twitter. Will, what's up?
Jaden: He doesn't have one. Usually there'll be people who have a Twitter. He doesn't have one. He likes Facebook.

Will: I got 44 million people on Facebook. I'm just saying. I don't know how many people you got on Twitter.

Jaden: I knew you were going to say that.

Will: I'm just saying, I don't know how many people you got. How many people?

Jaden: Four million.

Will: Four million. Yeah. I got that after my first number.

Jaden: I feel like people on Facebook will just randomly follow just anybody.

Will: (Laughs hysterically)

Jada's on Facebook.

Will: Oh!

Jaden: Oh!

Will + Jaden: Ohhhhhh!

Will: Oh, Mommy be going in!

Jaden: My mom goes in on Facebook! She goes in!

Is she aware other people can read what she writes?

(Both laugh loudly)

Jaden: She'll be like—

Will: She'll call a family meeting.

Will + Jaden: (Doing Jada impression) "I'm posting this on Facebook!"

Jaden: (continuing impression) "I don't care what people say. If we get hit for this, this is what the truth of the world is." Uh, OK mom. She'll be on the phone with a manager, "I don't care what they said, I'm posting this on Facebook." I think she should write a book.

Will: Jada is very serious and opinionated and she loves Facebook because it's the only place she's ever had where she's felt like all of her can be received. She's struggled her whole life where only a part of her is OK.

In her posts, she can take a generality and break it down into a truth. She posted recently about you having a "grown relationship."

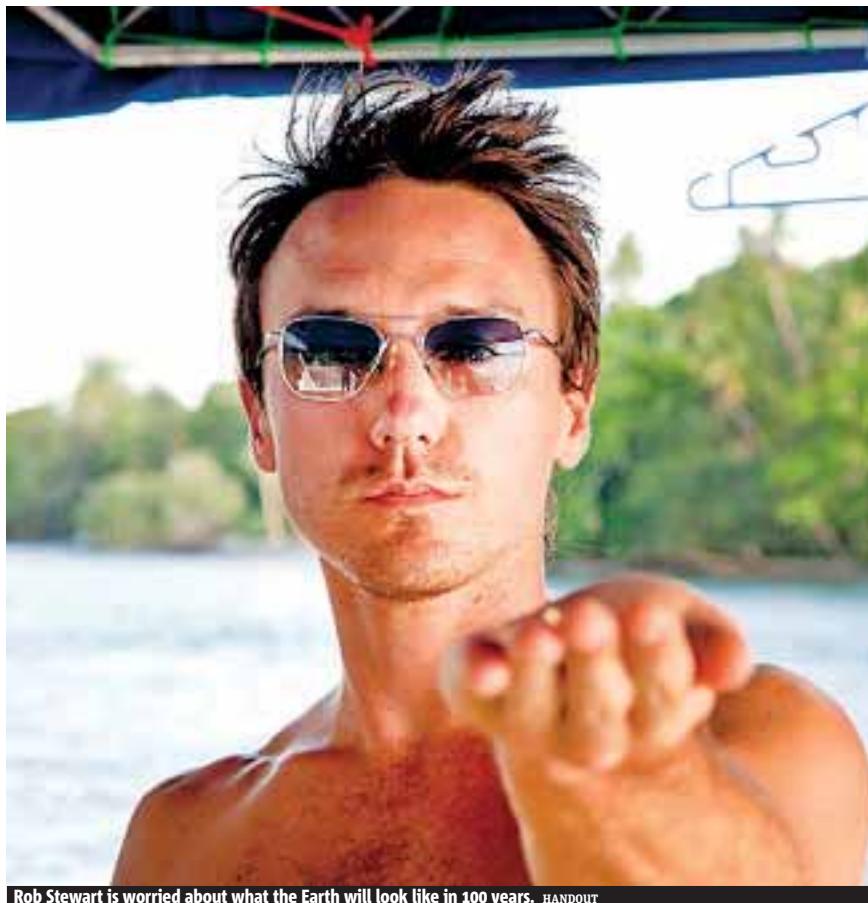

Will: A "grown relationship."

(Looks down.)

Anything to add?

Will: She put some serious, hardcore truth out there. (Pauses) And I think, the five minutes we have left, aren't gonna be enough to cover it.

OK, on to the Earth Day issue then?
Will: Yes! Earth Day! Please!

Rob Stewart is worried about what the Earth will look like in 100 years. HANDOUT

Our survival on Earth 'is in jeopardy,' filmmaker says

Revolution. Toronto's Rob Stewart's latest film has humans in midst of another near extinction

IAN GORMELY
scene@metronews.ca

To hear filmmaker Rob Stewart tell it, global events like today's Earth Day should be viewed more as grim reminders of the tough path ahead than as a celebration.

"We're in a really delicate situation right now where our survival is in jeopardy," says the director. "We've got to do something fast."

The dire straits Stewart describes take centre stage in the Toronto native's latest film, Revolution, which lays groundwork of humanity's survival plan for the next 100 years. "We follow life as a character through 3.5 billion years of evolution," he says. "Five mass extinctions almost wiped life off the face of the planet culminating with humans in the midst of another one of these extinctions." Escapist cinema this is not.

Stewart, a wildlife photographer turned environmental activist, recognizes that fear mongering isn't the way to draw people to your cause — appealing to their humanity is. "We've got to get an emotional reaction out of the public so that they care about it," he says. "We thought that following me around as a character would be a good way to do that."

The film opens with Stewart on press junkets promoting Sharkwater, his debut film about shark finning. During this period he realized that all his efforts to save sharks would be in vain if their entire eco-system were to collapse. From there he details the effects of ocean acidification as a result of over-consumption. By the time the credits roll, Stewart is knee-deep in the fervent activist movement coalescing around efforts to stop the destruction of the environment.

Never a fan of politics, Stewart nevertheless sees activism as the place where average Joes can make a difference. "If this was a spectator sport, we would have won already. But it's not. We're going down the tubes fast."

The list of problems facing our planet — climate change, ocean-acidification — and the factors that created this situation, roll off Stewart's tongue with ease. But he's not all doom and gloom; his optimistic outlook is palpable, making him an ideal spokesperson for the cause. Yet it's the younger generation who he's banking on.

"There's an opportunity for kids to become heroes for the eco-systems that we love. And I think this generation is going to make more heroes than ever before because we're engaging in the biggest battle humanity's ever been in," he says.

"It's going to be wicked to see what happens and it's going to call the best in humanity to the height of their potential."

Family brands you shouldn't wear proudly

IT'S ALL RELATIVE
Kathy Buckworth,
kathybuckworth.com

We all know that expression "there's no such thing as bad PR." Actually, there is. (Remember Michael Richards?) And bad public relations around your family can haunt you for years at a school, in a neighbourhood or during get-togethers with relatives. Some family branding and publicity should be avoided at all costs:

- Yelling Family: One of my personal favourites — the screeching mom, the angry teenagers, the loud bursts of a daddy baritone ... love these guys. They make the rest of us feel civil and proud. Yell on, fine people.

• Late Family: No matter what you are expecting them for — school, a wedding, a family gathering, a dinner party, or picking up your kid for hockey — these folks simply cannot arrive anywhere on time. You've tried, oh you've tried ... nothing works. This is their lifestyle.

- Disaster Family: This is the family who always manages to have at least one member fall sick or get injured on a vacation; routinely has something blow up, get wet, or collapse in their house; and has the best excuses for missing school concerts (the bulldozer drove through our basement), parent-teacher interviews (the water line to the fridge exploded in my face), or the last game of the hockey playoffs (the back tire just flew off as we drove down the highway). Event planning.

Organizing an event that pleases both parents and kids can be done — we promise

NATALIE SHURE

Metro World News in New York

With her L.A.-based company Chic Events, Rachel Hollis has dreamed up parties for every occasion.

She's even managed to pick up tricks to help parents please crowds of all ages.

How can parents involve their kids?

I like to keep them busy and out of my hair. I'll often say, "Go to the backyard and find three branches and two pretty flowers," and I'll incorporate those things into the decor. It becomes a game for them.

What is the most common party-planning mistake you've seen?

Many people don't give themselves enough time. Plan like a Boy Scout. Always be prepared.

Think of the event as two separate parties — one for adults and the other for kids. ISTOCK

Find success in your new setting

New world of work.
Just arrived to Canada? Here's how to prepare for your first interview

YLVIA
VAN BUUREN
CareerBear.com

Job interviews are stressful at the best of times, but when you are new to Canada and still figuring your way around, those interviews can be downright scary. A lack of confidence about Canadian culture and customs can make the interview process that much more challenging.

"To help with the jitters, practise your interview skills beforehand," advises Haris Blentic, manager of Dixon Hall Employment Services Centre in Toronto.

Dixon Hall is a community agency that offers mock interviews so job seekers can review their speaking skills, body language and approach to one of life's most stressful scenarios.

Check with your local employment office as more and more community agencies are offering mock interviews, says Blentic.

Here's your game plan:

Be on time

Arriving late gets you a low score before you have taken off your coat. Account for travel time. If you can, do a test run in advance. Plan to Open and engaged

Connect with the interviewer

- People often shake hands when meeting for the first time. Also, maintain eye contact and good posture during the interview. Your body language should convey confidence and trustworthiness.
- Your tone of voice should be strong. There's no need to be overly deferential or view yourself as a less-than. "Remember," says Blentic, "you're interviewing them as much as they are interviewing you."

arrive 10 minutes early.

Prepare ahead

Do some research online (at the library or employment office) so you understand the job you are applying for and how to dress for success. If it's an office job, you'll need to wear the appropriate clothing. If it's a warehouse job and casual clothes such as jeans are acceptable, it's still important to look tidy. If you're short on funds, there are organizations that provide professional attire for men and women. Try dressforsuccess.org and careergear.org.

Mute it

Turn off any electronic device that you carry. "I've seen it happen where a cellphone rings and interrupts an interview," says Blentic. "That's never good form."

Make a list of your strengths and weaknesses ahead of time and be prepared to counter any weakness with a positive

For example, if you don't know how to work with a certain software program, tell the interviewer that you are a quick study. If you are still struggling with English (and don't need to be fluent for the job), be sure to say you are taking English language lessons.

Accentuate answers with examples

"The more concrete examples you provide the better you look," says Blentic. Instead of saying you did blood work in a medical lab, say you have experience drawing blood, labelling samples and that you worked for a lab for several years.

Quick and savoury: Chorizo Kale Sauté with Beans

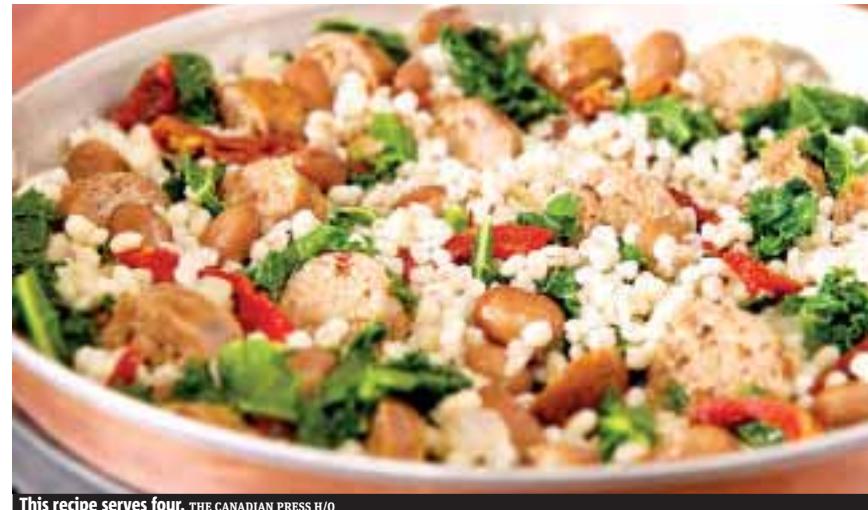

This savoury dish comes together very quickly and makes an ideal weeknight supper.

Kale is a nutritional powerhouse that's low in calories and high in fibre as well as vitamins A, C and K.

1. In a medium saucepan, bring water and salt to a boil.

Ingredients

- 250 ml (1 cup) water
- Pinch salt
- 50 ml (1/4 cup) pearl barley
- 350 g (3/4 lb) chorizo or Andouille sausage
- 8 sundried tomato halves, thinly sliced
- 2 garlic cloves, minced, or to taste
- 6 stalks kale
- 1 can (540 ml/19 oz) cannellini (white kidney) or Romano beans, drained
- Crushed red pepper, to taste (optional)

This recipe serves four. THE CANADIAN PRESS H/O

Add barley; return to a boil, then cover and reduce heat. Simmer for 40 minutes.

2. Heat non-stick skillet. Dice sausage and toss it into skillet, stirring to brown.

3. If dried tomatoes are very firm, soak for several minutes in warm water; drain and thinly slice. Add to skillet. Stir in garlic and sauté briefly.

4. Remove ribs from kale and thinly slice leaves. Add to skillet along with cooked barley and beans; cook until kale is slightly wilted. Sprinkle with crushed red pepper if you'd like more heat. THE CANADIAN PRESS / GOBARLEY.COM

VOLUNTEER CENTRES GET TRAINING

The federal government/Volunteer Canada partnership recently announced it is providing training to more than 120 volunteer centres.

"Our government is committed to the safety and security of all Canadians, including those who are most vulnerable — like children and the elderly," said Minister of Public Safety Vic Toews. "Through the training provided in conjunction with Volunteer Canada and the volunteer screening handbook, our government is responding to a call from organizations to help them better screen volunteers and provide community service organizations invaluable tools to improve the safety and quality of programs whose volunteers and employees are in trusted positions."

"Effective volunteer screening is vital to the health of Canada's voluntary sector," said Paula Spevak Sladowski, Volunteer Canada's interim president and chief operating officer. "It helps organizations achieve better volunteer matching, improved safety and quality of programs, and reduced risks and liability. Volunteer Canada is very pleased to collaborate with the government of Canada on this initiative, and we are grateful for the commitment of our partners who have received the training — local volunteer centres and national non-profits alike."

In October 2012, Public Safety Canada launched the Screening Handbook and partnered with Volunteer Canada to develop training materials and to offer "train the trainer" sessions based on the Screening Handbook for national, provincial and community volunteer organizations.

Through its training, Volunteer Canada has reached more than 700 community organizations and has made an outstanding contribution in helping to prevent abuse, and build safe and resilient communities. The Volunteer Canada training sessions were held in volunteer centres across Canada throughout February and March, and were designed to help organizations better screen volunteers.

Volunteer Canada's commitment to providing leadership and resources across the country is supported by organizations such as Big Brothers Big Sisters and the Victorian Order of Nurses.

FORTWHYTE ALIVE SUMMER CAMP SUPPORTS YOUTH

The 2010 Canada Survey of Giving, Volunteering and Participating found that over the last decade younger people have volunteered more than any other age group. In fact, 58 per cent of Canadians aged 15-24 are involved in volunteering. This puts young people well above the national average of 47 per cent.

The FortWhyte Alive Youth Camp Leadership Program is focused on guiding and supporting youth as they grow and develop. Potential leaders are given opportunities to test their skills and learn incrementally in a supportive, safe environment. They find adventure; friends and nature experiences that help them discover their strength and interests and build their résumés.

The FortWhyte Summer Volunteer Program draws more than 100 teens, ages 14-19, as camp counsellors. Many of the counsellors have graduated from camper to volunteer camp counsellor, head-counsellor-in-training and then head counsellor. With additional leadership and maturity, counsellors can apply for summer employment as section co-ordinators or camp field director.

PLAY ACTIVE ROLE IN VOLUNTEERING

AT RED RIVER COLLEGE

Take your volunteering to a whole new level at Red River College.

For those who love to be involved in the community by giving back and playing an active role through their volunteer work, the volunteer management certificate program at Red River College will give you the training to turn your passion into a career.

"Volunteers play an important role in the success of any organization," says Gail Mireau, program manager, community service and education at the school of continuing education at Red River College.

"Someone needs to be leading these volunteers."

The volunteer management certificate trains students to manage and motivate groups of volunteers. To earn the certificate, students must complete six core courses and 72 hours of practicum or electives.

The core courses of this program include — recruitment and marketing, risk management, program planning and evaluation, interpersonal communication, and working with volunteers.

The volunteer management certificate is available through distance learning so students can enrol in this program from anywhere in Canada to earn their certificate. Practicums may also be completed outside of Winnipeg.

Graduates can go on to a number of exciting careers within a variety of different fields, such as sports organizations or in the health-care field.

"Our grads get some pretty great jobs," says Mireau, adding that a recent student secured a position with the Winnipeg Blue Bombers, handling their volunteers.

Mireau says although this career can be a rewarding one, it takes the right type of person to rise to the challenge.

CONTRIBUTED

"As long as you are able to keep them motivated and the volunteers are finding the work rewarding, they will work just as hard as anyone else," Mireau says.

This program is the only one like it in Canada and follows the Canadian Administrators of Volunteer Resources (CAVR) guidelines. The program is offered in partnership with Volunteer Manitoba, Manitoba Association of Volunteer Administration (MAVA), and can be used towards a CAVR designation.

Red River College is also partnered with a number of volunteer branches throughout the country.

CANADIANS ACT FOR THE PLANET

On April 22, more than six million Canadians will celebrate Earth Day by taking part in some type of event, project or activity. Some will join in a large public event, such as Victoria's Earth Walk, Edmonton's Earth Day Festival in Hawrelak Park, or the Waterways Clean-up in Oakville, Ont. Others will participate in smaller private events organized by schools, employee groups or community centres.

Much of the credit for galvanizing environmental awareness goes to Earth Day Canada (EDC), a national charity founded in 1990. EDC designs, delivers and coordinates dozens of programs, projects and activities across Canada. This, in turn, sensitizes Canadians to environmental issues and encourages them to take effective action. EDC's efforts have earned it a string of awards from such groups as the Canadian Network for Environmental Education and Communication, and the Washington-based North American Association for Environmental Education.

"The key to making progress on environmental issues is partnership," says EDC president Jed Goldberg. "We partner regularly with thousands of public- and private-sector organizations across the country. Being part of a larger team inspires people to act."

Act for the Planet, EDC's primary campaign for 2013, focuses on encouraging both groups and individuals to take specific, practical steps to reduce energy consumption and promote sustainability. A calendar lists tips and links; a dedicated Facebook page offers daily challenges and community discussions. The campaign also provides teachers and students with information and support.

EDC's Eco-Kids program combines partnership with outreach and education. The program provides a wealth of resources — including lesson plans, activity sheets and other handouts — to teachers. Along with materials tailored to elementary school curricula, teachers and students can access stickers, temporary tattoos, bookmarks and posters; they can also create and share online profile pages of EcoKids schools, activities and accomplishments.

EDC also runs a program that encourages children to nurture their environmentalist spirit as they grow up. Each year, the Toyota Earth Day Scholarship Program grants 20 awards of $5,000 each for tuition, books and other expenses associated with full-time post-secondary study in Canada.

First launched in Wisconsin in 1970, Earth Day has helped spawn a generation of people aware of, and engaged in, environmental causes. Many consider it crucial to the birth of the environmental movement and to such milestones as anti-pollution legislation and the establishment of the Environmental Protection Agency in the United States.

RECYCLE WITH STYLE AT VALUE VILLAGE

Shopping and donating at Value Village provides a great way for customers to reduce, reuse and recycle.

There are many ways consumers can make small changes in their daily habits in order to have a positive impact on the environment, from switching to energy-efficient light bulbs and eco-friendly cleaning products to carrying reusable shopping bags. What many don't realize is that one of the easiest ways to "go green" is by shopping thrift. When you shop at Value Village stores and donate reusable items to its non-profit partners, you are keeping goods out of landfills and giving pre-loved treasures a brand new life.

"We know that families across Canada are clearing out their clutter and getting organized with spring cleaning," says Tony Shumpert, vice-president of recycling operations for Value Village. "By donating these items, instead of simply throwing them away, you can give back to your community and save quality goods from polluting the Earth. In fact, Value Village operates one of the largest recycling programs in the world, saving more than 600 million pounds of goods from landfills last year alone."

So how does it work? Every Value Village location partners with a charitable organization in its community, including Canadian Diabetes Association and Big Brothers Big Sisters of Winnipeg. All year round, each store pays its non-profit partner for every donated item, including clothing, housewares, books and more. Over the past 10 years, Value Village has purchased more than $1.5 billion of goods from its partners — turning otherwise unused items into sustainable funding that supports the non-profit's vital community programs and services.

The highest quality items are priced at a great value and displayed on Value Village's sales floors for purchase, while merchandise not suitable for resale is responsibly recycled.

Residents with clothing or household goods to donate can call participating non-profits for a home pickup or drop off their items at convenient Community Donation Centres located at every Value Village store.

UNORTHODOX IDEAS

You may already be part of the green movement — you ride your bike to work, bring reusable bags to the supermarket and grow a vegetable garden. If you are also interested in large-scale efforts to save the environment — or if your interests tend to be quirky and offbeat — the unorthodox ideas below will catch your attention. Crazy? Perhaps. Great conversation starters? Definitely.

MAKE DENSER CLOUDS

NASA and Bill Gates came up with an idea that might not hold water. They proposed ships that would suck up seawater and spray it high into the air, increasing the density of ocean clouds. In theory, the denser clouds would reflect more sunlight and slow the rate of climate change. However, the huge amounts of energy required to power these ships — along with the exorbitant cost of the project — make it unfeasible.

WRAP NORTHERN GLACIERS IN BLANKETS

Dr. Jason Box, a scientist from Ohio, came up with a proposal to lay huge polypropylene blankets over glaciers scattered throughout the north. The blankets would reflect the sun's rays and insulate the ice below. In theory, enough sunlight would be reflected to prevent the ice caps from melting. Might ruin the view, though.

PEDAL YOUR WAY TO FREE HOTEL MEALS

The Crown Plaza Hotel in Copenhagen is trying to save energy and encourage guests to be physically active. Guests who generate 10 watt-hours (about 15 minutes of cycling on exercise bikes in the fitness centre) receive a voucher for a free meal in the hotel restaurant.

CONSIDER THESE EARTH DAY ACTIONS

Here are just a few tips from the Act for the Planet 30-Day Challenge Actions Calendar.

GET RID OF DRYER SHEETS — They are full of toxins, expensive and unnecessary — a few sprays from a bottle of water will eliminate static cling. Better yet, use a clothesline when the weather is nice or an indoor drying rack when it's not.

LITTERLESS LUNCHES — Invest in reusable containers, utensils, thermoses and cloth napkins for the whole family. Use your travel mug at the local cafe.

START A VEGETABLE GARDEN — Whether it's in a few containers on the balcony or in a section of the backyard, grow some of your produce own this summer. Tomatoes, cucumbers, basil and parsley are particularly easy to grow.

HAVE A BLACKOUT NIGHT — Eat a no-cook dinner (salads, nuts, cheeses, crackers) and spend the night telling stories and playing cards, board games and musical instruments. Keep the lights off and use candles.

BUY LOCAL AND ORGANIC PRODUCE

Locally grown fruits and vegetables are usually fresher than those that have travelled thousands of kilometres. Since produce loses its nutritive value over time, they are also better for you.

AWARENESS IS KEY TO SOCIAL CHANGE

Earth Day, created as an awareness-raising event more than 40 years ago, continues to inspire people to adopt new environmentally friendly habits.

When millions of people wake up on April 22 and realize that it's Earth Day, many will ask: "What difference will it make?" Yet, just by pondering the precarious state of the environment, they have answered their own question: They are aware. Millions of us are aware. And that makes all the difference in the world.

As history demonstrates, awareness is the vital first step in bringing about change. For decades, second-hand smoke was quietly tolerated. As more and more people became aware of the dangers of cigarette smoke, however, the clean-air movement was born. Activists formed groups and coalitions, rallied the general public to their cause and inspired governments to ban smoking from public places.

The fight against racism has also been a long struggle and the progress made to date has been inspired by the public's growing awareness of the issues at stake. We have made great strides since the far-off days of slavery and the not-so-far off days of segregation and blatant discrimination. In 1955, Rosa Parks refused to give up her seat on a bus in Montgomery, Ala., to a white man. Her fight for justice soon became a national story across the U.S., and society took notice. The civil rights movement gained momentum, and attitudes towards racial intolerance began to change.

As the spotlight shines ever more brightly on the harmful practices of corporations, the wasteful ways of citizens and businesses, and the high-consumption habits of Western society, environmental awareness continues to grow. Gradually, the old ways of doing things are less and less acceptable.

We can be proud of the efforts of Earth Day organizers and volunteers to raise awareness of the problems facing the environment. But now that we're aware, what's next? That's where the real test begins. We must apply what we know to our day-to-day lives; we must take the concrete, practical steps that we know can reduce our environmental footprint. Awareness must inspire us to take action.

TREES PLAY VITAL ROLE IN ECOSYSTEM

Tree-planting events have been a popular part of Earth Day since the very beginning. The reason for this is simple — planting trees is one of the most effective ways to improve the environment. It is a progressive, optimistic and practical expression of respect for the planet. In both a literal and figurative sense, planting a tree is about putting down roots and creating a better future.

Trees play a number of vital roles in ecosystems around the world, particularly in cities and other developed areas. They filter pollution from the air, convert carbon dioxide into oxygen, recycle water and rejuvenate soil. Their shade helps reduce summer temperatures, while their branches provide perches and homes for birds and other animals. Humans benefit from their soothing effect, their fruits and nuts, and the shelter they give from wind and rain.

Despite all of these advantages, however, the reality is that trees in Canada are under threat like never before. The forestry industry, along with habitat loss due to population growth and agriculture, continues to diminish the number of trees in this country.

Compounding the problem in recent decades has been the steady march of invasive insects. The pine beetle, emerald ash borer, European gypsy moth, brown spruce longhorn beetle and sirex wasp have all devastated stands of trees from coast to coast. The impact of invasive species has been particularly dramatic in many urban neighbourhoods, where single species, such as the ash tree, were planted almost exclusively decades ago. Suddenly, the canopy is gone and the neighbourhood feels bare, cold and unwelcoming.

When it comes to choosing which species of tree to plant, consider several key factors, such as soil type, rain patterns and distance from obstacles such as overhead wires, buildings and fences. Some species grow more quickly than others, and some provide better shade. Fruit trees are an increasingly popular choice, particularly in family-friendly neighbourhoods, as they provide a direct link to a food source, and their blossoms delight the senses for a few weeks each year. Your local nursery is a great source of information. And many cities provide free saplings, so get planting.

Rangers wipe out Devils' playoff hopes

The New York Rangers insist they are focused much more on their drive toward the playoffs than ending the New Jersey Devils' post-season hopes.

With a thorough 4-1 victory Sunday, the Broadway Blueshirts took care of both.

Ryan Callahan scored a goal in the opening minute and another in the third period, and Henrik Lundqvist made 26 saves as the Rangers eliminated the Devils from the Eastern Conference playoff race.

Callahan provided the lead

34 seconds in. Derek Stepan added a goal in the first period and Taylor Pyatt snapped a long drought in the second for the eighth-place Rangers, who are inching closer to a playoff berth.

"It's always nice to beat them," said Brad Richards, who had two assists. "It was a big win for us. They're out now, but that's not why we were playing. We were playing because we need to stay alive. Now we're down to nine teams, so the odds are better."

Of the teams behind the Rangers, only Winnipeg can catch them. New York is even in points with seventh-place Ottawa, but the Senators have four games remaining — one more than the Rangers. Winnipeg is three points behind with three games left.

New York has won three straight and is 8-2-1 in its last 11. After a trip to Florida and Carolina, they will wrap up their season at home Saturday against the Devils.

MLB. Toronto avoids sweep at hands of Yankees as they prepare to hit the road

This time the rally stuck.

One day after an 11th-inning defensive blunder spoiled a Toronto comeback, the Blue Jays reeled off six straight runs Sunday afternoon to down the New York Yankees 8-4 and avert a series sweep.

Toronto (8-11) heads off to Baltimore for three games and then to New York for four, thinking it may finally be heading down the right road after a wobbly start.

"We still have that feeling inside that we're close — to breaking out and getting everything going in the right direction," manager John Gibbons said.

club. We just think it's a matter of time. Maybe today's something that will get us going."

There were a lot of contributors to Sunday's win.

With Toronto trailing 4-2,

Brett Lawrie doubled home two runs in a four-run sixth inning. J.P. Arencibia hit his seventh homer one inning later to keep the comeback cooking.

Adam Lind tied a club record with four consecutive walks, Melky Cabrera went 3-for-4 and Colby Rasmus went 2-for-3, driving in a run with a timely hit off a left-hander.

Munenori Kawasaki, in his first crack at leading off, scored and drove in a run in the first two innings.

And the Toronto bullpen — in the form of Brett Cecil (1-0), Esmil Rogers and Darren Oliver — delivered 3 2/3 innings of scoreless relief.

The Blue Jays opened the scoring for just the sixth time this season (it has won five of those games). It also marked the first time in eight games — an 8-4 win in Kansas City on April 17 — that it had scored more than four runs.

Horoscopes

Aries

March 21 - April 20

There is something you must do but you are not looking forward to it one little bit. Don't worry.

Taurus

April 21 - May 21

If you break the rules today others will judge you in a way that may not be fair, but you will only have yourself to blame. You know what is and is not permissible, so think before you act.

Gemini

May 22 - June 21

You may have got a rival right where you want them but now you are in control of the situation ask yourself, do you really want to make them suffer? You've won already.

Cancer

June 22 - July 23

You may be worried that a plan of some kind is not working out the way you expected but don't start changing things around just yet.

Leo

July 24 - Aug. 23

Is your sixth sense telling you that a loved one needs your help? Well it should be and if it isn't it means you are too wrapped up in your work to notice.

Virgo

Aug. 24 - Sept. 23

It seems you have been letting your fears get the better of you and if you allow it to continue it will affect your mood all week long. Don't let it happen. The world is still pretty marvelous – and so are you.

Libra

Sept. 24 - Oct. 23

It seems you have been letting your fears get the better of you and if you allow it to continue it will affect your mood all week long. Don't let it happen.

Scorpio

Oct. 24 - Nov. 22

Your money problems may be worrying but they are not as bad as you think. In fact over the next few days there will be signs that you are over the worst.

Sagittarius

Nov. 23 - Dec. 21

You need to identify your most important goal and focus on it to the exclusion of everything else.

Capricorn

Dec. 22 - Jan. 20

You need to identify your most important goal and focus on it to the exclusion of everything else. Most of all though you need to stop worrying about what the future may bring.

Aquarius

Jan. 21 - Feb. 19

Do you do something worthwhile or do you do something purely for fun? That is the question you are struggling with but you can have it all you know. Make time in your life for the meaningful and the mundane.

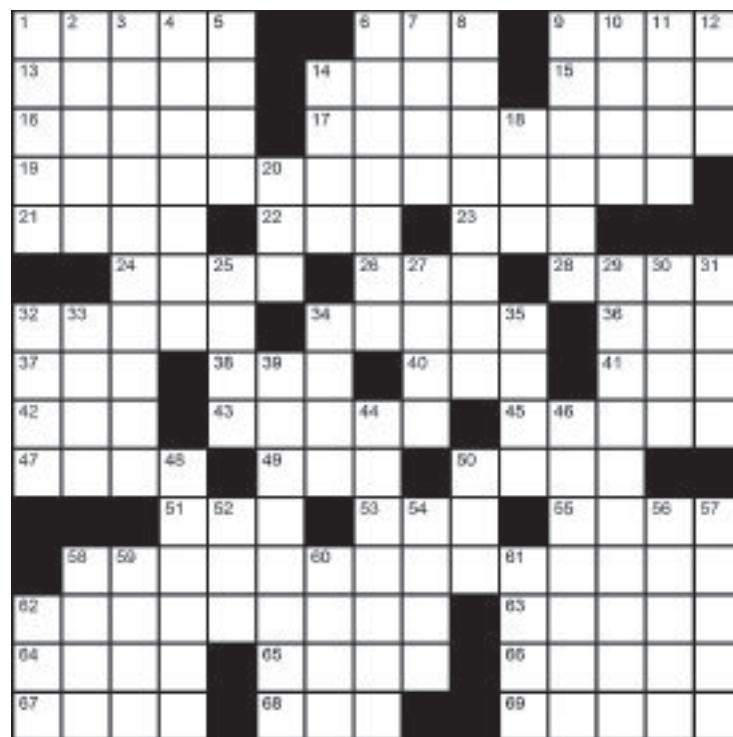

Pisces

Feb. 20 - March 20

You must let other people know how you feel today. If you don't they may assume you have no feelings towards them at all, and that's a recipe for disaster.
